Most classic rock fans don't realize that the records they've loved for years may not have been played by the artists on the label. Session musicians were the unsung heroes behind thousands of hit records, and after working in the same studios day after day, churning out the hits, some of them became notorious de-facto 'bands' in their own right. Join MMET as they use hit songs and music history to shed a long-overdue light on the musicians, studios, and scenes that gave the whole world something to dance about.
