Fifteen-year-old Christopher Boone is phenomenal at math, but has a lot more difficulty in dealing with people. He would rather be alone since he finds people confusing and dislikes being touched. Late one evening, he discovers his neighbor’s dog, Wellington, has been murdered. Christopher sets out to solve the mystery even though his father has forbidden it. Seen though Christopher’s video-game-like view of the world, this funny and moving story leads him to a horrifying revelation that changes his world forever.

Mark Haddon’s award-winning novel inspires this play about difference, being an outsider, and seeing the world in a surprising and revealing way.
